

Ambit Books is pleased to announce the publication of the fourth of four collections in our Here from Elsewhere series:

Time flows or runs through Nazand Begikhani's poems: the stream of her childhood becomes the mighty river Tigris then she finds herself washed up in exile on the Atlantic ocean, or by the banks of the Loire. But she is not prepared to just float with the current of the times or tradition. In her poems she fights with the Anfal, the genocidal campaign carried out against Kurdish civilians at the end of the 80s; she fights against honour killings and she fights for the perception of the Kurds in the West. These are painful poems: but pain expressed, of women, of the Kurdish peoples, above all needs to be witnessed by poets and their readers. Extract from the introduction by Richard McKane.

With Bells of Speech Ambit's fine new series introduces readers in Britain to a remarkable voice. Nazand Begikhani explores the experience of being an exiled Kurdish woman in visionary poems of rare political and spiritual depth. Like bells, they sound clear musical notes and linger in the mind long after they have first been heard. Fully cognisant of that 'thin line between life and death', they are poignant, but ultimately life-enhancing. Moniza Alvi

There is a thin line between life and death, my friend and I am a graveyard

I am happy to be alive, my friend

After Halabja and Anfal

I am happy to become the voice of a land
that contains the mass graves of our brothers

There is a thin line between life and death, my friend

Nazand Begikhani was born in Kurdistan (Iraq) in 1964. She has been living in exile (Denmark, France and later UK) since 1987. She took her first degree in English language and literature, then completed an MA and PhD in comparative literature at the Sorbonne. She published her first poetry collection Yesterday of Tomorrow in Paris in 1995. Her second collection Celebrations was published in Kurdistan by Arras in 2004. Arras also published her third collection Colour of Sand in 2005. Bells of Speech is her first collection in English.

She is a polyglot and translates her own poetry into French and English. Many of her poems are published in French, Arabic, Persian and English. She has also translated Baudelaire and Eliot into Kurdish.

Apart from writing poetry, Nazand is an active researcher and advocate for women's human rights. She is a founding member and co-ordinator of the network organisation Kurdish Women Action against Honour Killing (KWAHK). Her research on Kurdish gender is widely published in Kurdish, but also in French and English.
